Domestic violence on the rise during pandemic; anonymous tips to Crime Stoppers wanted

Vancouver, B.C. (April 22, 2020): The tensions that can emerge from being quarantined at home day-after-day with the same people are starting to reveal themselves in the latest statistics on domestic violence.

Metro Vancouver Crime Stoppers urges anyone with information on any specific case of domestic abuse to call and provide anonymous information.

“With no sign yet of the stay-at home orders being lifted, people may know of friends, neighbours, or even relative strangers down the street who may be suffering abuse at the hands of a spouse or partner. Many people don’t want to get involved, but an anonymous tip to Crime Stoppers may put an end to it, or even save a life,” says Linda Annis, Executive Director of Metro Vancouver Crime Stoppers.

Vancouver’s Battered Women’s Support Services reports a 300 per cent spike in calls to its crisis line since the COVID-19 outbreak began.

A similar trend is reported elsewhere in places like New York City, and United Nations Secretary-General António Guterres pointed out recently that violence is not confined to the battlefield. He said, “For many women and girls, the threat looms largest where they should be safest - in their own homes” due to COVID-19 lockdowns. He’s calling for what he calls “peace in the home”.

“With the pandemic deepening and domestic violence worsening here in B.C and around the world, we should all be vigilant. If you know someone who’s a victim, an anonymous call to Crime Stoppers means the information will get to someone who can investigate,” says Linda Annis.

Do you know a victim of domestic violence?

Some common signs that someone may be abused at home:

- Their partner may be jealous, possessive or excessively controlling
- Their partner may insult them in front others
- They constantly worry about making their partner angry
- They make excuses for their partner’s behaviour
- They have unexplained marks or injuries
- A noticeable change in normal behaviour; no longer spend time with friends and family
